

ABSTRACT

An implantable medical lead includes a sensor capsule coupled to a lead body through which a sensor bus extends to couple with the sensor capsule. The sensor bus includes an elongate coil conductor, an elongate cable conductor extending within the coil conductor, and a material, positioned between the cable conductor and the coil conductor, which has a relative dielectric coefficient less than approximately 10.